Geoff Moore

Los Angeles born and based photographer + director Geoff Moore creates classic imagery with contemporary innovation. He has left his indelible cinematic mark on international print and TV ad campaigns, the pages of major magazines, hit MTV videos, art books, and the walls of many galleries. He has shot numerous global campaigns for such brands as T-Mobile, Coach, Facebook, and Airbnb, to models and artists such as Heidi Klum to the The Red Hot Chili Peppers. His editorial work has been featured in numerous magazines such as W, ELLE, i-D, Interview, Flaunt, GQ, and Rolling Stone.

Geoff is known in the fine art world as well. ARTNET called Moore's recent first solo gallery show in Los Angeles a "Best In The Art World" (KM Fine Arts). This show garnered international praise from everyone from Rolling Stone to Esquire, Vice, Interview and W Mag. Moore's work has three times been chosen by American Photo as a "Photo Of The Year" for their permanent archive. His fine art work has been showcased at both Art Miami, Art Cologne, and The Pacific Design Center. The Lucie Foundation curated a duo show with fellow LA artist Alex Prager entitled "Facing West - Fashion In The Land Of Celluloid". Moore's directing work has garnered multiple accolades, including two Director of the Year nominations at the MTV and Billboard awards.

Moore began his directing career as the youngster amongst such visionaries as Gore Verbinsky and Jean-Baptiste Mondino, followed by several years directing for Ridley Scott's company RSA. He regularly shoots projects that span the commercial, art, and fashion world. His innovative artistry invites an even more exciting future, as he continues his photographic and directorial journey.
